CUPID WINS IN SPITE OF KAISER

A Former Cloverport Boy Takes Scottish Girl for His Bride. Sends Unique Announcement Card.

An announcement was received here last week from a soldier boy to his parents saying, "We went to a little church around the corner, and lived happily ever afterwards." This is the culmination of a love affair that began some two or three years ago when the young couple met in the employ of the same business man in Louisville. The couple there formed an attachment for each other that ripened into love and all plans were made to marry and locate in Wisconsin when the army draft disarranged their plans.

The young man was called to the colors a few weeks ago, and the young lady joined him in Louisville on Wednesday last where they were quietly married by the Rev. A. T. Kasey and the above unique announcement sent the groom's parents. The young soldier is Virgil Alexander Babbage, the son of Mr. and Mrs. V. G. Babbage of this city, and his bride is Miss Elizabeth MacArthur, of Scotland, but who, for several years, has lived with her sister in Long Island, New York.

The Breckenridge News extends congratulations to the happy couple.

Breckenridge Boy in Camp Wadsworth

Nine of the Breckenridge county boys who were called in the draft on February 25, were transferred in a month's time from Camp Zachary Taylor to Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, S. C., and the latest news that comes from them is very gratifying to their friends and families in the home county.

Soon after the boys arrived in Camp Wadsworth, W. W. Stone and Ken Bandy, who are among the nine, were appointed acting corporals. They had six weeks of intense training and on May 22, took examination for non-commissioned officers. Bandy passed for Corporal and Stone for Sergeant. Serg. Stone has been in service only three months and is ever men who have been three and four years in service.

The other seven who are making good are: S. C. H. Alexander, Chas. Alexander, Virgil Carman, W. Storms, J. Storms, M. Brown and V. Carman.

Remains Brought Here For Burial

The remains of Mrs. Geo. Gregory, of 608 E. Washington St., Louisville were brought here Sunday, June 3, for interment in the Cloverport cemetery. The funeral was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jno. F. Gregory on the River road, conducted by Rev. A. N. Couch.

The deceased had been a sufferer of tuberculosis for three years. She was before her marriage, Miss Lillie Basham of Stephensport, and besides her mother, sister and two brothers, she leaves a husband and four children, Roy, Cecil, Fred and Marie Gregory.

Northern Boys Pleased With Southern Hospitality

Mr. N. H. Quiggins of this place has received a late message from her brother, Roy S. Rhodes, Private Co. 2 1st Provisional Regiment, Camp Macon, Ga., who says he is getting along nicely and enjoying army life with the exception of the hot climate.

"There are fifty thousand soldiers in this camp, a great many of them northerners and they think the hospitality of the south is great. We get good wholesome food and plenty of it." "At present we are having plenty of excitement as army life is new but when things get old then keep plenty of letters coming my way or I will be lonesome."

Priv. Rhodes became a soldier May 26, and before that he held a position in Chicago for several years. He is from Breckenridge county originally, being the son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Rhodes of McDaniels.

FARMER KILLED NEAR CLOVERPORT

Cliff Stinnett Stabbed in Jugular Vein—Instant Death. O'Riley Gives Himself Up To Marshal Mullen. Cause Not Known.

For the first time within many years Cloverport was the scene of a killing on last Friday morning when Mr. William O'Riley killed Mr. Clifton Stinnett while the latter was working in a corn field.

The motive of the killing is not authenticated as Mr. O'Riley refused to make any statements after he surrendered himself to chief of police Mullen. It was said by the brother of the dead man that Stinnett and O'Riley were apparently the best of friends.

The tragedy occurred about nine o'clock, Friday morning. Stinnett was employed as a tenant on the farm where he met his death, which is about two miles from the city limits and belongs to O'Riley who lives in the west end of town. There were no eye witnesses to the killing and it was for several hours afterwards before the wounded man was found by his wife. As he did not come in for dinner at the 12 o'clock hour, Mrs. Stinnett became alarmed and proceeded to go in search of her husband and found him dead lying near a spring. After he was taken to the house, Coroner Lee Bishop was summoned and found that Stinnett had met with foul play. The coroner called Dr. F. S. Clark and the latter made the statement that death was due to an incised wound in the jugular vein on the left side, causing instant death. There was a second wound in the back of the head and Dr. Clark said they were both made with a sharp instrument.

Early Saturday morning O'Riley sought Chief of Police Mullen and gave himself up saying that he had killed Stinnett. Along with the funeral procession of the unfortunate man who was taken to Hardinsburg for burial, O'Riley was taken and placed in the Hardinsburg jail.

Stinnett was born in Breckenridge county and would have reached his 41st birthday this July. He is the son of Benjamin L. Stinnett and leaves a wife and four small children, the youngest being 18 months old. The funeral was held Saturday morning from St. Ronald's church. Rev. Norman said the last rites and the interment took place in the Catholic cemetery.

DR. H. J. BEARD IN CHICAGO UNIVERSITY

Taking a Special Course. Citizens of Livermore are Unstinting in Their Public Acknowledgement of Dr. Beard's Excellent Services.

Through the request of Mr. W. L. Matthews, Superintendent of the graded and Public schools, Livermore, Ky., the following letter is published in behalf of Dr. Harold J. Beard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Beard of Hardinsburg, Ky., and who is at present taking a special course in Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat work in the Chicago University.

Livermore, Ky., June 1918. Editor of Breckenridge News, Cloverport, Ky. Dear Editor:—Thinking that a word concerning Dr. H. J. Beard would be of interest to the many readers of your paper and to scores of his friends in Breckenridge county, I am acting in behalf of his host of friends in Livermore and McLean county who are unstinting in their praise of him both as a citizen and physician in writing this article for your paper.

Dr. H. J. Beard who has been located at Livermore since 1903 and who has recently left to take a special training in Chicago University preparatory to enter a greater field of service has been so faithfully described as to his life, character and public service in the remarks of the friends who know him intimately and well, both as a citizen and a physician that there seems little left for me to do except reiterate what they have said; in private life his qualities were sociability, kindness and a generous spirit. In professional and business life he was a broad minded man with fine natural common sense; a man of positive opinions and firm convictions yet he was willing, unless some vital principle was involved, to consider what he thought might be the sounder judgement of his friends.

The records of Dr. Beard's practice bear ample testimony to his capacity for work and his disposition to discharge his duty. To him, as to every one, came the call to citizenship; and his civic pride and active interest in all movements that go to the betterment of a town, county and state speak of his conscientious work and willingness to bear his full share of the burdens of the community. He figured prominently in all public welfare programs and the past five years has been chairman of the Board of Education in which place he showed a deep and unselfish interest in the educational welfare of the poor and well-to-do alike and was never satisfied with anything short of the very best results oftentimes doing things at a sacrifice on his own part for the benefit of the public at large. The good people of Livermore and neighboring community speak on one accord in recognizing the great loss to our town, school and community in giving up Dr. Beard. He was a much loved physician, a manly man and a live progressive spirit. We sustain the loss of a great citizen and our best wishes go with him in his future work. (Signed) W. L. Matthews.

The people of this county are expected to subscribe for and purchase during 1918 War Savings Stamps to the maturity value of $427,980.00. In order to raise the total amount from this county, it will be necessary that each school district subscribe the amount allotted to it. This will not impose any burden on any person in the district if each person does his duty, and the persons conducting the meetings in each school district have been instructed to insist upon the total amount allotted to it being subscribed before the meetings are adjourned.

New Manager for the Texas.

Since the appointment of Wible L. Mapother as federal manager of the L. & N. and the L. H. & St. L. R. R. it means that for the duration of the war the two corporations will have one manager for directing their affairs in place of two and consequently Mr. Milton H. Smith, president of the L. & N. and Mr. R. N. Hudson, president of the L. H. & St. L. will be superseded by Mr. Mapother.

It is conceded by many railroad men that Mr. Hudson will be retained in active service on the Texas road on account of his ability as a railroad construction engineer, however no official statement has been made in regard to the new management.

It is hoped by the patrons of the L. H. & St. L. that Mr. Hudson will be retained in some capacity to look after the affairs of the road he has so ably managed for the last several years.

GERMANS GRAB ALSACE PLANTS

Systematic Stripping of Industry Before the Day of Reckoning.

INDIGNATION IS WIDESPREAD

Even Officials Responsible to Kaiser's Government Forced by Public to Give Voice to Emphatic Protests.

Amsterdam.—German carpingagers are overrunning Alsace to grab all property confiscated by the state under various pretexts. Indignation among the people is widespread, and even officials responsible to the Kaiser's government are forced by public opinion to give voice to emphatic protests.

Alsace is a great industrial center and one of its principal industries is the manufacture of textiles. Most of the textile factories in Alsace were taken over by the state as a war measure. As some of the stockholders were Frenchmen, the mills, it was alleged, were partly enemy alien property. So the state took charge of the mills and prepared to liquidate them. This liquidation was carried out recently.

Alsation business men and capitalists had formed a corporation to buy the mills in an effort to keep them in Alsation hands. Even city administrations, such as the municipality of Mulhausen, where a number of factories are situated, bought stock in this corporation. The name of the corporation is the United Alsation Textile Factories.

Forbidden by Berlin.

But it was decided in Berlin that the Alsations should not be allowed to buy what was practically their own. Another concern, called the Bleichroeder group, was more successful. Their bid for the property was accepted by the government, while the Alsation offer was rejected. It was announced the Bleichroeder bid was preferred because it accepted state supervision as one of the conditions of the sale. Baron von Stein, undersecretary of state, in defending the government's action before the main committee of the Reichstag, said the Bleichroeder group had offered a million marks more than the Alsation corporation. Besides, the Alsations had refused to subscribe to the conditions, including state supervision of management.

Consternation and indignation reigned at the meeting of the city council of Mulhausen when the government's decision was made known by Mayor Zopf. He said not only had the offer of the Alsation corporation, of which the city of Mulhausen itself was a component part, been rejected by the government, but he also had been informed on good authority all the other Alsation factories to be liquidated would be sold to "old-German" concerns beyond the Rhine.

Ruthlessness Condemned.

This attempt to Germanize Alsace by ruthless industrial methods was condemned by several members of the city council. Councillor Emmel denounced as a subterfuge the statement of Undersecretary von Stein, who had said the Bleichroeder offer had been accepted because it was the more favorable one. The speaker saw in the government's action a systematic effort to take Alsation property away from Alsations.

The Bleichroeder group, the successful bidder, is headed by the banking house of Bleichroeder in Berlin. The original Bleichroeder was Prince Bismarck's financial man and his heirs are still in control of the banking house. Old Bleichroeder was not very scrupulous in his financial methods, but this did not prevent Bismarck from conferring the title of nobility upon his money-maker. This was one of the greatest jokes perpetrated by Bismarck.

However, Baron Bleichroeder's heirs are still barons and their influence in the highest circles is still formidable. It seems they had little trouble in obtaining the Alsation properties at favorable terms—favorable to themselves, for to them state supervision means supervision by friends.

GAS MASK SQUAD FINDS LEAK IN AMMONIA PIPE

Cincinnati.—The first run made by the "gas mask squad" of the local fire department was in response to an explosion in an ice plant. The firemen used their gas masks in locating a leak in an ammonia pipe. Not only had the fumes filled the plant, making it impossible for anyone to stay in the building without a gas mask, but patrons in a drug store across the street had to get out into the open air.

Girls to Do Farm Work. Los Angeles, Cal.—An army of 1,005 high-school girls of this city have volunteered to harvest crops and will be ready for call by the Woman's Land Army of America after June 21, when the local schools close. By that time the high-school farmettes expect to have at least 3,000 in their ranks.

GARDEN VEGETABLES NEED SUNNY PLACE

Most Crops Will Not Thrive if Planted in Shaded Spot.

Fair Amount of Sunshine Is Essential to Beans, Tomatoes, Beets, Peas, Corn and Carrots—Avoid North Side of House.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Most garden vegetables will not make a satisfactory growth where they are shaded during even a part of the day. It is extremely difficult to find space in the city back yard where there is not some shade at least a portion of the daylight hours. Such plants as lettuce, onions and plants raised for their leaves can be grown in considerable shade, but beans, tomatoes, beets

Give the Garden a "Place in the Sun."

peas, corn and carrots must have a fair amount of sunshine if they are to amount to anything.

It would be a waste of costly seeds to plant most garden crops on the north side of the house or near a high board fence that would effectively shut out the sunlight. Those who can not provide a plot of ground in the sunshine are advised to confine their gardening to the few crops that will make a fair growth in partial shade.

TOP-WORKING OF PEACH TREE

Change of One Variety to Another May Be Done by Shield Budding or by Grafting.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Sometimes it is desirable to change the top of a peach tree from one variety to another. A grower may find after his orchard begins to bear that he has a larger number of trees of some variety than he wants; a block of trees may prove to be some other variety than the one ordered; or, for some other reason, a variety is not well adapted to the needs of the owner. In such cases he may top-work the tree either by budding or by grafting to a desirable variety.

The ordinary method of shield budding is most commonly used for this purpose. If the tree to be top-worked is not more than two or three years old it is usually practicable to insert the buds directly into the main limbs well down toward the point where they leave the trunk.

If the tree to be top-worked has reached the age when the bark on the main limb has become too thick and firm to be manipulated readily for budding, it is necessary first to head it back somewhat, as when the top is to be replaced with new growth of the same variety, and later insert buds on the new branches that develop after the tree has been headed. When this course is followed the buds should be inserted in the new growth as near the trunk as is practicable, in order to have as large a portion of the top as possible of the new variety. This is also desirable on account of the subsequent management of the tree.

Top-working is sometimes done by grafting instead of budding, the ordinary cleft graft being generally used. However, budding is to be preferred, especially as the wounds made in grafting do not heal readily in the case of the peach, though when properly done the union of stock and scion is generally strong enough to make it fairly serviceable tree. But trouble resulting from difficulties in the healing of the wound are likely to occur.

BELGIAN HARE IS SUPERIOR

Weights More Than Other Breeds, Develops Rapidly and Quality of Meat Is Excellent.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The Belgian hare is one of the best rabbits for table use. It weighs more than most breeds, develops rapidly and the quality of the meat is superior to all the others. The Flemish giant is a Belgian hare bred exclusively for large size, with the result that the meat is coarser and less delicate in flavor. These characteristics are considered by some persons as desirable, but this is largely a matter of individual taste.

FEEDING REFUGEES ON FRENCH TRAIN

American Red Cross in Paris Quickly Answers Emergency Call.

HOMELESS LAUGH AND JOKE

No Bitterness, No Complaint, No Despair Among People, Many of Whom Were Refugees for Second and Third Time.

Paris.—"A thousand refugees from the east of Amiens will pass through Acheres at seven o'clock tonight. They will not have had any supper, some of them may not have had any lunch. There is no food there and no facilities for feeding them. Can you help us?"

That was the telephone message from the French minister of the interior which came to the American Red Cross at noon one day during the German drive on Amiens, and the answer was "Yes. Emergency messages are no surprise to us these days." The food was ordered out of the warehouses and a score of volunteers rounded up.

They started at six o'clock the same evening. One five-ton truck loaded with tinned beef and condensed milk, figs, prunes, chocolate and heaps of huge loaves of war bread; two carloads of midnight volunteers, stenographers, bureau chiefs, drivers and canteen workers set out on their way to bring help to the homeless refugees.

They rolled out through the residential district of Paris, out past the fortifications, bumped through grimy factory suburbs and on into the open country where the level plains stretch off into infinite distance, broken only by interminable rows of slim poplars.

Then suddenly without warning, there emerged from the forest into a black smudge of railway tracks, cinders, flat-tops, passenger cars, sheds, platforms, warehouses, cranes—Acheres. It was the junction point, where the thousands of refugees were to stop for half an hour.

Saluted With One Arm. Lieutenant M— met us there, saluted stiffly with his one arm, and did the honors of the station. A group of weary, muddy "permissibles," most of them over forty, just back from the Champagne front, were routed out to help us establish our tables on the cinders between the tracks, and pile the food where it could conveniently be passed into the train.

They unloaded bread, scraped cheese, opened tins of "bully beef," knocked the tops off the boxes of figs and prunes and made plans to feed a thousand people in half an hour. But somewhere off in the silent country the train, packed full of exiles, was standing on a side track. It was after two in the morning when the long train with its 28 carriages filled with refugees came into Acheres.

A few windows were opened; tired faces looked out and voices asked, uninterestingly, "Where are we?" and were surprised to be told that they were near Paris. The train was on its way, they said to Tulle in the Correze department, in the south of France.

"Will they treat us well there?" an old woman asked and they, in the fullness of their ignorance, not daring to say otherwise, answered "Yes."

It was a short half hour. They carried their bread, they filled the old woman's apron with figs and prunes, they gave milk to the children, meat to the old men, cheese to everybody. They absorbed cakes of sweet chocolate in a rapid and mysterious manner. Some of them were the much-battered women of Picardy and some were grizzled old farmers. Others were city folk, obviously not used to third class travel. There were families of three generations huddled together on their way—somewhere. Some clutched precious umbrellas, some carried bird cages, some alarm clocks. Some of them had dogs, some had cats. But the pathos of it all was not on the surface. Some of them quietly told that they were refugees for the second and third time and laughed and joked when they woke up. There was no bitterness, no complaint, no despair.

Bread Pile Fell Away.

The huge pile of bread fell away, the fig boxes were emptied, the tins were all handed into the trains. The engine shrieked a shrill French whistle and the train pulled away. The rescuers were in the silence of the night. One of many thousands of refugees had had one dreary midnight meal from home—one lonely meal out of hundreds, perhaps thousands, before them.

A train load of wounded from the front joggled in ten minutes later. The men nurses carried water through the carriages swiftly and silently. Then the Americans handed out the remnants of their stores of figs and the train slipped away again. Behind them could be heard the dull booming of the barrage guns about Paris, and the visitors knew that another air raid was on. They waited until the barrage stopped, then they headed back through the defenses of the capital. There was a faint light as they rode back through the forest. They could see clumps of yellow daffodils utterly oblivious of war.

NEW SLANT ON WORK OF Y. M. C. A. IN FRANCE

Prominent Western Minister Tells of Religious Activities Within Sound of Hun Guns.

The Rev. Robert Freeman, D. D., of Pasadena, Cal., one of the best-known ministers of the West, is in France as a secretary to the Y. M. C. A. Here's what he has to say of religion within sound of the German guns, where Jesus merges into helpfulness, and creeds don't count so much as being kind: "You can get any opinion you want on the religious work of the Y. M. C. A. in France."

"It is overdone, it is underdone, it isn't done at all; it is narrow, it is bigoted, it is too generously broad; it is stiff, it is highly-tight, it isn't child-like; there is no singing worth speaking of, and why don't you have something besides hymns? And any one of these opinions can be defended, first by the character of the person voicing it, and, second, by reference to the place visited by the critics."

"But here's a little incident that happened the other day which tells the whole story of the religious work of the Y. M. C. A. in France:

"An American lad with nerves shattered by what he had seen at the front, was going out of his mind. He had had the experience before, and was in an agony of anticipation. He was a Catholic, and, as such, most anxious to confess. He could not speak French and the only available priest could not speak English."

"Is there anyone here who can speak French? Inquired the priest."

"The Y. M. C. A. woman running the hotel knew the language. So the three retired into a quiet room, and the American soldier confessed his sins, through a Protestant woman to a Catholic priest, in a Y. M. C. A. hut in France."

LONDON SAUSAGE SOLD OUT

State Factory Output Checked by Lack of Materials.

The state sausage factory is hoarding, the entire product at present finds its way to the east end of London, but at present the factory is able to supply but part of the demand for its products.

At the ministry of food it is denied that other factories will be opened shortly. Lack of raw material is given as the reason.

Ground His Finger Tips.

Carl Heinrich Low, an enemy alien arrested at Montpelier, Vt., some months ago, charged with making pro-German utterances to members of a local exemption board, was sent to Atlanta, Ga., for internment for the duration of the war. Low was paroled after his arrest, but was taken into custody again later when it was discovered that he had ground the tips of his fingers on an emery wheel in an effort to avoid having finger prints taken when he was called upon to register. Washington authorities immediately ordered his internment.

Dan Proves Loyalty.

Litchfield, Ill.—Is Dan Darnia, a coal miner of Hillsboro, disloyal? Listen! When somebody said he was, this is what he did: Walked into the sheriff's office, asked for a flag, kissed it fervently, went to the Red Cross headquarters, bought a membership for his entire family, proceeded to a drug store and bought an American flag, took it home and hung it over the front door.

National and Local Meat Business

The meat business of the country is conducted by various agencies—

These slaughtering and distributing agencies fill a well defined but necessarily restricted place in the distribution of the products of live stock.

Good Colored Man Dead.

Irvington, Ky. June 2. (Special)—Rev. Essie Robertson, (colored) was born July 16, 1844 died June 2, 1918 making him 73 years 10 months and 16 days of age.

He had been complaining more or less for about six years being a sufferer of acute indigestion but he had only been in bed for two week's Friday and during these two week's he had been unable to speak a single word.

For the last eight days during his illness he would say he was ready to die and was just waiting on the Lord the last song that he sung was "I am going Home to die no more."

He professed religion long before freedom and has ever since been a faithful christian.

He had been married 53 years and he and his wife were the first colored people to secure license in this county after freedom, to this union were born six children of this number three are living to day. He has been a loving father and husband and was always ready to do what ever he could to add to the comfort and happiness of his family.

On finding that his health and physical strength was failing him he said that he was perfectly willing to turn all his affairs over to his wife. They had worked side by side for a number of years but now as he had become the weaker of the two he was going to be guided by the hand of a loving wife who had proved to be so faithful and kind for so many years. He proved faithful nursing him and caring for him until his work here on earth was finished and the Lord sent an angel to carry his soul to its last place. He leaves a wife, three children and thirteen grandchildren and a host of relatives and friends to mourn his loss.

All eggs must be candied May 1 to until Jan. 15 of each year. It is the new law just in effect. All buyers of eggs, hucksters, storekeepers, dealers, etc., will be liable under the Federal Food Administration Law. This is done in order that the blame for the losses in eggs may be laid upon the person responsible for them.

PLEDGE WEEK---JUNE 24 TO 28

Upon advice of National Chairman F. A. Vanderlip and Federal Director J. D. Lyon, of the district embracing the State of Kentucky, the big June Drive, in which we are to secure pledges of the people for the balance of our quota of $50,000,000, has been fixed for June 24 to 28 next, instead of June 3 to 8, as announced previously.

Kentucky will put it "over the top" in this big drive, which is to terminate on the 28th, and which day President Wilson will be asked to proclaim "National War Savings Day" throughout the United States. Governor Stanley will be asked to issue a proclamation for the State of Kentucky, and the Mayor of Louisville and of every city in Kentucky will be requested to issue a proclamation to the people of his municipality.

County Chairmen from over Kentucky assembled in Lexington on Friday and heard the details of the plan for the big drive from the lips of Federal Director Lyon, Chairman J. E. Kavanaugh, of the Section of State Organization, and Ward Burgess, of Nebraska, who originated the idea, and who secured pledges for the entire quota of the State during a week's drive similar to that which is to be put on in Kentucky in June.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF MEETINGS OF KENTUCKY COUNCIL OF DEFENSE

War Savings workers throughout Kentucky will take notice of the splendid move of the State Council of Defense in calling War Conferences to be held at county seats throughout the State, beginning immediately, for the purpose of arousing the people to war conditions and enlisting their aid in the various Government and other valuable war activities.

Representatives of all war activities are urged and invited to participate in these conferences and present their cause to those who are gathered together. These conferences afford an especially splendid opportunity to War Savings workers in every county. Our campaign is on for the entire year. Many of these meetings will be held during the present month of May, and in such counties the County Chairman and his organization must co-operate most actively with the representative of the Council of Defense in getting up the meeting, as it will count very materially with you in the big June Drive which is just ahead of us. Where the Conference is to be held in a county during the time of the Drive it will be a big booster for our activity, and where it is to be held afterward, during the summer it will help to keep up interest in ours as well as the other war activities, and will materially help in your follow up campaign to see that those who pledge themselves in the June Drive meet their pledges and keep on saving and buying Thrift Stamps and War Savings Stamps.

A general program has been mapped out by the Kentucky Council of Defense, which doubtless will be varied in different communities, as special speakers are secured for occasions. The general program is as follows:

10:00 a. m.—A mass meeting will be held and the program will consist of devotional exercises, community singing, and speeches by noted patriots, thinkers and orators.

1:30 p. m.—The fathers, mothers, relatives, and all members of the families of the soldier boys who are already in military service, as well as all those who have boys who will be in the approaching draft, are urged to attend this meeting. A special speaker, who is in touch with the war situation and who has a stirring message of patriotism, will address the meeting. The public is cordially invited to be present.

2:00 p. m.—Forum: Subject, "The Different War Organizations." Representatives of the different war organizations, including Council of Defense, Food and Fuel Administration, Liberty Loan, Women's War Work, War Savings, Red Cross, Knights of Columbus, Y. M. C. A., Four-Minute Men, Chambers of Commerce, Educational and Agricultural Organizations and all other patriotic activities, are urged to be present and participate in the discussions. No representative should speak longer than ten minutes.

3:30 p. m.—Representatives of the different patriotic activities will be given an opportunity to call their workers into a special meeting for the purpose of studying their specific problems and perfecting their organizations.

7:30 p. m.—A mass meeting will be held and the program will consist of devotional exercises, community singing, patriotic music, and speeches by leaders of known reputation.

In presenting its program of exercises for the War Conferences, the Council of Defense puts it this way:

There is but one patriotic business before the liberty-loving people of the world today, and that is the monumental task of vanquishing an intoxicated militarism, of vindicating, perpetuating and defending human rights and liberties, and of carrying the flag of democracy to victory.

You can help win the war by attending the county war conference and studying the interpretations of the needs and the issues of the hour that will be made. You can help by using your influence in having a large delegation of citizens to attend from your community.

There is no one thing that will do more to awaken the patriotism of the people and make the Conference and all patriotic meetings a success than for the choirs of all the churches and the people of the entire community to assemble at mass meetings and engage in community singing. It is earnestly desired that the county council and all other patriotic organizations will get together in an earnest effort to develop community singing and make it a part of the program of the War Conference as well as a part of all patriotic programs which will be held from time to time in every section of the county. The Kentucky Council of Defense will furnish printed folders without cost containing the National Anthems and War Songs to all county councils desiring the same.

Continuing, under the heading, "Will You Help?" the Council of Defense sends out the following valuable suggestions:

The home can help by attending the Conference and by using its influence in having the members of every home to attend.

The school can help by organizing itself into a war of publicity committee with a view of promoting every war effort, developing a positive patriotism, practicing community singing, attending the war conference and participating in its work.

The church can help by delivering a patriotic sermon on the crisis of the hour, and by announcing the program of the war conference at its regular services, giving publicity to it and urging the people to attend.

The press can help by rendering invaluable assistance through its news and editorial columns, thereby giving publicity to the meeting and calling upon the people to give it earnest support.

The County Superintendent, who is a member of the Advisory Committee of the Council of Defense, can help by sending out a letter to the leading citizens of the county, especially to the trustees of the schools, calling their attention to the Conference and asking them to attend the Conference, to organize their school districts for the Conference, and to take advantage of the opportunities offered.

The farm demonstrator, who is a member of the Advisory Committee of the Council of Defense, can help by disseminating information among the masses and getting the agricultural organizations interested in the success of the meeting, and by participating in the program.

The high schools of the county and the county can help by practicing community and patriotic singing and adjourning on the day of the Conference and participating in the song service.

The different war organizations, including the Council of Defense, Food and Fuel Administration, Liberty Loan, Women's War Work, War Savings, Red Cross, Knights of Columbus, Y. M. C. A., Four-Minute Men, Chambers of Commerce, Educational and Agricultural organizations, and all other patriotic activities, can help by putting themselves affirmatively behind the Conference and using such influence as they have in making the work of all of the different war efforts a success.

The Woman's organizations of the county can help by putting their splendid organizations to work in an endeavor to make the meeting productive of the highest results.

The Commercial Clubs and Chambers of Commerce can help to do effective work by arousing and informing the citizenship of their community concerning the seriousness of the war as well as ways and means of winning it by using printed posters or placards in conspicuous places throughout the county.

Traveling men going over the county usually are most willing to render service by working up meetings.

The Four-Minute Men can help by calling the attention of the people to the work of the Conference.

The Boy Scouts can help by advertising the meeting, by having demonstrations and carrying banners with appropriate mottoes and inscriptions upon them. Also in putting up placards and distributing advertising matter.

The different choirs of the different churches, as well as all of the people of the county, can help by getting together and practicing community singing with a view to making it one of the leading features of the Conference.

All others can help by talking about the Conference, by boosting it, and by getting the citizens of the county interested in it and its work.

Persons desiring further information concerning the War Conference should address the Publicity and Speakers' Bureau Committee, Kentucky Council of Defense, Bowling Green, Ky.

SALT WOODEN SHIPS

Method Used to Lengthen Life of Vessels.

Turns Seepage into Brine, Which Acts as a Preservative of the Wood.

Seattle, Wash.—C. O. Morrow, president of the Elliottray Shipbuilding company, suffered something of a shock the other morning, but at that it was nothing to the shock suffered by several prominent citizens who were taking a stroll through the company's big wooden shipbuilding plant.

The citizens were shocked when they discovered that 20 tons of rock salt is used in building each of the big wooden ships now under construction in Seattle. Mr. Morrow was shocked because his clients didn't know that rock salt is a shipbuilding material. Everybody on the water front knows that, but it seems that there are a lot of prominent business men who didn't. There is now a suspicion that only a very few residents east of Railroad avenue know that a wooden ship has to be salted.

In showing the prominent citizens about his plant Mr. Morrow came to the building in which he stores this rock salt. A railroad car was unloading another shipment.

"This is where we keep the salt for the ships," said Morrow.

"How, how?" said one caller, who is something of a humorist. "I suppose you're afraid the ships will get too fresh?"

"That's the exact truth," said Mr. Morrow.

But the citizens wouldn't believe him until they had examined the salt. Some of them tasted it. The storehouses contained 120 tons.

Mr. Morrow explained that the salt is poured between the frames of a wooden ship above the water line and is tamped down solid. Then if any water seeps into the spaces between the frames it is turned to brine and does not damage the wood. Instead, it acts as a preservative.

PLAY GAME WITH BIG GUN

Frenchmen Wager as to Hour the Bombardment of Paris Will Start.

Paris.—A new sport has made its appearance in Paris as a result of the long-range cannon bombardment. One may drop in at any cafe or restaurant any day and find the game in progress.

After the dinner or between sips of coffee a paper is passed around with the question: "At what hour will the big cannon fire its next shot?" Each person fills in the time he thinks the shelling will begin and pays a franc. The firing of the cannon causes more excitement than fear. The winner rushes for the list, while the others crowd around, shouting and gesticulating to find out whose guess has been the nearest and who gets the money.

BROTHERS PREFER DEATH TO EXPOSURE OF BODIES

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Rather than expose their bodies to a physical examination William and Christian Hoag, brothers, prefer death. This was their statement to United States Commissioner Knox here when they were charged with evading the draft by not presenting themselves for physical examination.

Order Pickled Cabbage.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The local food administration has decided to make sauerkraut less German by striking out the hyphen. It has been officially placed on the list of patriotic foods and it is believed more would be eaten if given the name "pickled cabbage."

FARM AND STOCK.

Mrs. Frank Mattingly sold Walter Hawkins, Tobinsport, Ind., 6 Duroc pigs for $10 and one to J. D. Starks for $12.

The farmers around Garfield have their crop of tobacco nearly all set with a good stand. They are having trouble with their corn crop on account of a bad stand. They have had to replant nearly all their crop. William Hobbs is out $16 for seed corn and no stand yet.

L. B. Reeves reports a fine crop of wheat in Hardin county. Says it is the best all round crop he has seen. He examined some of the crops and the meshes run from 9 to 11 grains.

E. H. Shellman & Son, Union Star, report a sale of six acres of sweet clover seed for $500. They run the clover through a threshing machine and the seeds through a clover huller which cleaned them beautifully and with very little work. They have 140 acres of wheat, 80 head of cattle, 200 head of goats and 30 head of sheep. They are expecting a yield of 30 bushels of wheat to the acre off of the six acres that produced the sweet clover.

Mr. George Shellman, the junior member of this firm, is a progressive farmer and uses up-to-date methods. Says that clovers are the foundation for good crops and successful farmers. The goats are great scavengers and keep all the fields free from undergrowth and weeds.

Seventy-five head of Herefords averaged $2,722 at Warren T. McCrary's sale, Kentland, Ind., May 22. This herd is headed by Perfection Fairfax. Twenty bulls brought $84,575, an average of $4,228; fifty-five females brought $119,600, an average of $2,175. H. H. Norton makes a specialty of Herefords at his Webster Stock Farm. He is building up a nice herd and we hope will soon have some in the $2,000 class.

The horse and mule raisers in this county must raise better horses and mules if they want to keep up with the cattle industry of the county. A lot of good mares are needed for foundation stock.

W. J. Owen & Son, Valley Home Stock Farm, Hardinsburg, Route 1, sold S. C. Hayercraft & Son a fine 300 pound Poland China boar for foundation stock.

Farmers can now ship butter, eggs, dressed fowls, vegetables and fruits by mail to any post-office that can be reached in a reasonable time without spoiling. They must be packed in crates, boxers or baskets or any suitable containers.

A hoghead of new Burley sold in Louisville last week for $52 per hundred. Medium and good grades are from $2 to $3 higher. Dark leaf is still on the upward move and prices getting better every week.

Fully seventy-five per cent of the tobacco crop in the county has been set. And but for the shortage of plants the full crop would have been planted.

L. A. Faurest had a splendid sale of Jerseys, May 28. Thirty-three head made an average of $148. Peter Lee Atherton, Louisville, bought the fine bull, Golden Maid's Fern Prince, for $360. Hortense's Fern (2) went to

C. H. Drury, Irvington, R. 1, for $105.

Farmers who want help on their farms should write C. A. Tavebaugh, Federal Director Boys' Working Reserve, Louisville. 4000 boys between the ages of 16 and 21 have registered to help farmers. They are too young to go to the front and want to show their patriotism by helping to raise food for the boys over there.

Somewhere in France

Dear Home Folks:— I will try and drop you a few lines tonight. This leaves me fine and dandy and I hope you are the same. I received your last letter today that you wrote me while in Georgia. It has been some time on the road. I wonder what you all are doing now. Guess Dad is planting corn. Tell him I would like to be there to help him. Mamma, I landed here just seven months to the day. I went to Camp Taylor. Hope you both are doing all right and getting along with the work fine. Guess Edith is married by now. Sure did surprise me, not knowing they were sweethearts. I certainly do want to hear from you and all the rest of you people over there. When you write to me tell me all the news that's going. All the boys are doing all right. Some nice country over here, much better than I expected to find. How are all

Mr. James Pate

The following letter comes from Priv. James Pate, son of Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Pate, of Cloverport, and who recently landed overseas— Somewhere in France, A. E. F.

Dear Mother:— Will write you a few lines to let you know I am well and getting along fine. How is every one at home? It seems like a long time since I received a letter from home but I think it will take about twenty days for mail to reach here. You must write often and I will write as much as I can. I like France fine although it is some different from the States.

Well, mother I don't know of any more to write this time. You write as often as you can. Mail only leaves here once a week and I will mail you a letter every week if I can. Tell all hello for me.

Harold Murray in France. Not a native born Cloverporter, but one who spent several years of his boyhood here and who is quite well remembered, is Harold M. Murray. Mr. Murray is at present a sailor overseas and he writes most interestingly of the war times costumes in France.

In his own words he says:—"It is very interesting over here—the people, horses and all. The strangest sight to me is to see the girls in bloomers running street cars, wiping engines, switching, etc. I saw five girls pulling a flat car by a long rope yesterday.

The cars we travel in are the funniest things—not as long as a street

A Toast to the Flag

Here's to the RED of it,
There's not a thread of it
No, not a shred of it,
In all the spread of it
From foot to head,
But heroes bled for it,
Faced steel and lead for it,
Precious blood shed for it,
Pathing in RED.

Here's to the WHITE of it
Thrilled by the light of it
Who knows the right of it
But feels the might of it
Through day and night
Woman's care of it
Made manhood dare for it
Purity's prayer for it Kept it so WHITE.

Here's to the BLUE of it
Heavenly view of it
Saw spangled hue of it
Honesty's due of it
Constant and true.
Here's to the whole of it
Stars, stripes and pole of it
Here's to the soul of it
RED, WHITE and BLUE.

car and divided up into compartments, ten men to a compartment. We rode two days and nights that way. All the box cars are very small and are marked 40 men or 8 horses. Can you imagine riding that way?

Nearly all of the lower classes wear woolen shoes and make the biggest noise, more than the average horse. The children follow along begging cigarettes, tobacco and pennies.

I met one girl, a school teacher, who spoke English. About four of us boys and a half-dozen girls in the bunch and we had some fun for a half hour before our train pulled out; we had a French book, and with her help, we learned some French but had more fun trying to trade with the shop-keepers, getting back change, etc.

They treat us fine and are glad to see us, but all want to know when more are coming.

One French Infantryman, when somebody told him that thousands and thousands were coming over weekly, said: "Thousands nothing, you had better send millions and make it soon." Another said the war would last four more years.

I saw a bunch of Zouaves. Gee, but they are big, husky blacks! I was talking to one that talked some English. He said, 'fight, fight, fight to the finish, death or no Germany!'

Long Live The King

While they played, overhead the great house was ready at last. Its woodwork shone. Its gold crosses gleamed. No flock of dust disturbed its austere magnificence.

The man and the boy who had been working on it stood back and surveyed it.

"All ready," said the man, leaning on the handle of his long brush. "Now it may happen any time."

"It is very handsome. But I am glad I am not the old king." The boy picked up pails and brushes. "Nothing to look forward to but—that."

"But much to look back on," the man observed grimly, "and little that is good."

The boy glanced through a window, below which the riding ring stretched its brown surface, scarred by nervous hoofs. "I would change places with the crown prince," he said enviously. "Listen to him! Always laughing. Never to labor, nor worry, nor think of the next day's food—"

"Young fool!" The man came to his shoulder and glanced down also. "Would like to be a princeling, then? No worry. No trouble. Always play, play!" He gripped the boy's shoulder. "Look, lad, at the windows about. That is what it is to be a prince. Wherever you look, what do you see? Stablesmen? Grooms? Bah, secret agents, watching that no assassin, such perhaps as you and I, lurk about."

He stopped and stared, wiping the glass clear that he might see better. Nikky without his cap, disheveled and flushed with exertion, was making a frantic shot at the white ball, rolling past him. Where had he seen such a head, such a flying mop of hair? Ah! He remembered. It was the flying young devil who had attacked him and the others that night in the by-street, when Peter Niburg lay stunned!

Miss Braithwaite had a bad headache that afternoon, and the crown prince drove out with his aunt. The Archduchess Annunziata went shopping. The crown prince sat in the carriage and watched the people. The man beside the coachman sat with alert eyes, and there were others who scanned the crowd intently. But it was a quiet, almost adoring crowd, and there was even a dog, to Prince Ferdinand William Otto's huge delight.

The man who owned the dog, seeing the child's eyes on him, put him through his tricks. Truly a wonderful dog, that would catch things on its nose and lie dead, rousing only to a whistle which its owner called Gabriel's trumpet.

Prince Ferdinand William Otto, growing excited, leaned quite out of the window. "What is your dog's name?" he inquired, in his clear treble. The man took off his hat and bowed. "Toto, highness. He is of French origin."

"He is a very nice dog. I have always wanted a dog like that. He must be a great friend."

"A great friend, highness." He would have expatiated on the dog, but he was uncertain of the etiquette of the procedure. His face beamed with pleasure, however. Then a splendid impulse came to him. This dog, his own companion, he would present to the crown prince. It was all he had, and he would give it, freely, even though it left him friendless.

But here again he was at a loss. Was it the proper thing? Did one do such things in this fashion, or was there a procedure? He cocked an eye at the box of the carriage, but the two men sat impassive, immobile.

Finally he made up his mind. Hat in hand, he stepped forward. "Highness," he said nervously, "since the dog pleases you, I—I would present him to you."

"To me?" The crown prince's voice was full of incredulous joy.

"Yes, highness. If such a thing be permissible."

"Are you sure you don't mind?"

"He is the best I have, highness. I wish to offer my best."

Prince Ferdinand William Otto almost choked with excitement. "I have always wanted one," he cried. "If you are certain you can spare him, I'll be very good to him. No one," he said, "ever gave me a dog before. I'd like to have him now, if I may."

The crowd was growing. It pressed closer, pleased at the boy's delight. Truly they were participating in great things. A small cheer and many smiles followed the lifting of the dog through the open window of the carriage. And the dog was surely a dog to be proud of. Already it shook hands with the crown prince.

Perhaps, in that motley gathering, there were some who viewed the scene with hostile eyes, some who saw, not a child glowing with delight over a gift, but one of the hated ruling family, a barrier, an obstacle in the way of freedom. But if such there were, they were few. It was, indeed, as the terrorists feared. The city loved the boy.

"I Would Present Him to You."

Annunziata, followed by an irritated Hilda, came out of the shop. Hilda's wardrobe had been purchased, and was not to her taste.

"Good heavens," cried the archduchess, and stared into the carriage. "Otto!"

"He is mine," said the crown prince firmly. "He is the cleverest dog. He can do all sorts of things."

"Put him out."

"But he is mine," protested Ferdinand William Otto. "He is a gift. That gentleman there, in the corridor jacket—"

"Put him out," said the Archduchess Annunziata.

There was nothing else to do. The crown prince did not cry. He was much too proud. He thanked the donor again carefully, and regretted that he could not accept the dog. He said it was a wonderful dog, and just the sort he liked. And the carriage drove away.

He went back to the palace, and finding that the governess still had a headache, settled down to the burnt wood frame. Once he glanced up at the wooden dog on its shelf at the top of the cabinet. "Well, anyhow," he said sturdily, "I still have you."

CHAPTER XI.

As a Man May Love a Woman.

Hedwig came to tea that afternoon. She came in softly, and delicately, for she was doing a forbidden thing, but Prince Ferdinand William Otto had put away the frame against such a contingency. He had, as a matter of fact, been putting cold cloths on Miss Braithwaite's forehead.

"I always do it," he informed Hedwig. "I like doing it. It gives me something to do. She likes them rather dry, so the water doesn't run down her neck."

Had Miss Braithwaite not been ill, Hedwig would have talked things over with her then. There was no one else to whom she could go. Hilda refused to consider the prospect of marriage as anything but pleasurable, and between her mother and Hedwig there had never been any close relationship.

But Miss Braithwaite lay motionless, her face set in lines of suffering, and after a time Hedwig rose and tiptoed out of the room.

Prince Ferdinand William Otto was excited. Tea had already come, and on the rare occasions when the governess was ill, it was his privilege to pour the tea.

"Nikky is coming," he said rapidly, "and the three of us will have a party. Please don't tell me how you like your tea, and see if I can remember."

"Very well, dear," Hedwig said gently, and went to the window.

Nikky entered almost immediately.

As a matter of fact, although he showed no trace of it, Nikky had been having an extremely bad time since his return; the chancellor, who may or may not have known that his heart was breaking, had given him a very severe scolding on the way back from Wiedling. It did Nikky good, too, for it roused him to his own defense, and made him forget, for a few minutes anyhow, that life was over for him, and that the chancellor carried his death sentence in his old leather dispatch case.

After that, arriving in the capital, they had driven to the little office in a back street, and there Nikky had roused himself again enough to give a description of Peter Niburg, and to give the location of the house where he lived. But he slumped again after that, ate no dinner, and spent a longish time in the place, staring up at Annunziata's windows, where he had once seen Hedwig on the balcony.

Then, late in the evening, Nikky was summoned to the king's bedroom, and came out pale, with his shoulders very square. He had received a real wiggling this time, and even contemplated throwing himself in the river. Only he could swim so damnable well!

But he had the natural elasticity of youth, and a sort of persistent belief in his own luck, rather like the chancellor's confidence in seven as a number—a confidence, by the way, which the countess could easily have shaken. So he had wakened the next morning rather cheerful than otherwise, and over a breakfast of broiled ham had refused to look ahead farther than the day.

That afternoon, in the study, Nikky hesitated when he saw Hedwig. Then he came and bent low over her hand. And Hedwig, because every instinct yearned to touch his shining bent head, spoke to him very calmly, was rather distant, a little cold.

"You have been away, I think?" she said.

"For a day or two, highness."

"And today," he added, reproachfully, "today you did not ride."

"I did not feel like riding," Hedwig responded listlessly. "I am tired. I think I am always tired."

"Lemon and two lumps," muttered the crown prince. "That's Nikky's, Hedwig. Give it to him, please."

Nikky went a trifle pale as their fingers touched. But he tasted his tea, and pronounced it excellent.

Prince Ferdinand William Otto chattered excitedly. He told of the dog, alluding to its cleverness, but passing politely over the manner of its return. Now and then Hedwig glanced at Nikky, when he was not looking, and always, when they dared, the young soldier's eyes were on her.

"She will take some tea without sugar," announced the crown prince.

While he poured it, Hedwig was thinking. Was it possible that Nikky, of every one, should have been chosen to carry to Karl the marriage arrangements? What an irony! What a jest! It was true there was a change in him. He looked subdued, almost sad.

"To Karl?" she asked, when Prince Ferdinand William Otto had left the room. "Officially?"

"Not—exactly."

"Where, in Karl's?"

"I ended," Nikky confessed, "at Wiedling."

Hedwig gazed at him, her elbows propped on the tea table. "Then," she said, "I think you know."

"I know, highness."

"And you have nothing to say?"

"Highness," Nikky began huskily, "you know what I would say. And that I cannot. To take advantage of Otto's fancy for me, a child's liking, to violate the confidence of those who placed me here—I am doing that, every moment."

"What about me?" Hedwig asked. "Do I count for nothing? Does it not matter at all how I feel, whether I am happy or wretched? Isn't that as important as yours?"

Nikky hung out his hands. "You know," he said rapidly. "What can I tell you that you do not know a thousand times? I love you. Not as a subject may adore his princess, but as a man loves a woman."

She drew herself up. "Love!" she said. "I do not call that love."

"It is greater love than you know," said poor Nikky. But all his courage died a moment later, and his resolution with it, for without warning Hedwig dropped her head on her hands, and, crouching forlornly, fell to sobbing.

"I counted on you," she said wildly. "And you are like the others. No one cares how wretched I am. I wish I might die."

Then indeed Nikky was lost. In an instant he was on his knees beside her, his arms close about her, his head bowed against her breast. And Hedwig relaxed to his embrace. When at last he turned and looked up at her, it was Hedwig who bent and kissed him.

"At least," she whispered, "we have had this. We can always remember, whatever comes, that we have had this."

But Nikky was of very human stuff, and not the sort that may live by memories. He was very haggard when he rose to his feet—haggard, and his mouth was doggedly set. "I will never give you up, now," he said.

Brave words, of course. But as he said them he realized their futility. The eyes he turned on her were, as he claimed her, without hope. For there was no escape.

Hedwig, with shining eyes, was already planning.

"We will go away, Nikky," she said.

"Which of you is in authority?" She demanded.

"Because I have given my word to remain with the crown prince." Then, seeing that she still did not comprehend, he explained, swiftly. He stood, as many a man has stood before, between love and loyalty to his king, and he was a soldier. He had no choice.

It was terrible to him to see the light die out of her eyes. But even as he told her of the dangers that compassed the child and possibly others of the family, he saw that they touched her remotely, if at all.

All she said, when Nikky finished, was: "I might have known it. Of course they would get me, as they did the others." But a moment later she rose and threw out her arms. "How skillful they are! They knew about it. It is all a part of the plot. They made you promise never to desert Otto, so that their arrangements need not be interfered with. Oh, I know them, better than you do. They are all cruel. It is the blood."

That evening the Princess Hedwig went unannounced to her grandfather's apartment, and demanded to be allowed to enter.

A gentleman in waiting bowed deeply, but stood before the door. "Your highness must pardon my reminding your highness," he said firmly, "that no one may enter his majesty's presence without permission."

"Then go in," said Hedwig, in a white rage, "and get the permission."

The gentleman in waiting went in, very deliberately, because his dignity was outraged. The moment he had gone, however, Hedwig flung the door open, and followed, standing, a figure of tragic defiance, inside the heavy curtains of the king's bedroom.

"There is no use saying you won't see me, grandfather. For here I am." They eyed each other, the one, it must be told, in trifle uneasily, the other desperately. Then into the king's eyes came a flash of admiration, and just a gleam of amusement.

"So I perceive," he said. "Come here, Hedwig."

A sister of charity was standing by the king's bed. She had cared for him through many illnesses. In the intervals she retired to her cloister and read holy books and sewed for the poor.

The sister went out, her black habit dragging, but she did not sew. Some time later she heard bitter crying in the royal bed chamber, and the king's tones, soothing now and very sad.

"There is a higher duty than happiness," he said. "There are greater things than love. And one day you will know this."

When she went in Hedwig had gone, and the old king, lying in his bed, was looking at the portrait of his dead son.

The following morning the Countess Loschek left for a holiday. She had the choice of but two alternatives, to do as she had been commanded, for it amounted to that, or to die. The committee would not kill her, in case she failed them. It would be unnecessary. Enough that they place the letter and the code in the hands of the authorities, by some anonymous means. Well enough she knew the chancellor's inflexible anger, and the Archduchess Annunziata's cold rage. They would sweep her away with a gesture, and she would die the death of all traitors.

A week! Time had been when a dismissed the caretaker with a gesture.

"Have you any discretion over me? Or must you refer matters to those who sent you?"

"I must refer to them."

"How long will it take to send a message and receive a reply?"

He considered. "Until tomorrow night, madame."

Another day gone, then, and nothing determined!

"Now, listen," she said, "and listen carefully. I have come here to decide

IF A WATCH IS WEARING APPAREL, THEN HE WINS

Wichita, Kan.—Is a watch wearing apparel? That is the question that John Lewis, a Wichita furniture dealer, has asked the courts to decide. Lewis has the business in his wife's name. He has been sued several times lately.

In one suit his watch and all the money that he happened to have with him, 50 cents, were attached. Lewis, through his attorney, claims that the watch is wearing apparel, "adornment," and cites the Century dictionary for proof.

ERROR STAMPS BRING $20,000

Inverted Airplane on New Impression Creates Big Value—Bought by Colonel Green.

New York.—A sheet of 100 of the new postal airplane stamps, but with the airplane turned upside down through an error made by the bureau of engraving and printing at Washington, has been purchased for $20,000 by Col. E. H. R. Green of Texas, son of the late Hetty Green. Over a window counter at the post office in Washington this sheet sold for $24.

So far as is known here, this is the only sheet that escaped the vigilance of the Washington postal authorities.

Colonel Green said here he planned to retain a portion of the sheet for his collection and dispose of the other stamps among his friends. It is predicted by philatelists that if the sheet proves to be the only one in existence outside the government ownership, the stamps will attain a philatelic value of $250 each.

letter?"

When he hesitated, perplexed, she got up and moved to her writing table. "I shall write the letter," she said laughingly. "See that it is sent. When I report at the end of the time that I have sent such a letter, you can judge better than I the result if it has not been received."

He was still dubious, but she wrote the letter and gave it to him, her face proud and scornful. But she was not easy, for all that, and she watched from her balcony to see if any messenger left the castle and descended the mountain road. She was rewarded, an hour later, by seeing a figure leave the old gateway and start afoot toward the village, a pale faced man with colorless hair. A part of the hidden guard that surrounded her, she knew, and somehow familiar. But, although she racked her brains, she could not remember where she had seen him.

That day, toward evening, the huge man presented himself. He brought no letter, but an oral message. "Permission is given, madame," he said. "I myself shall accompany you."

RAISE GARDEN STUFF

Red Cross Establishes Truck Farms in France.

Supplies Recreation and Employment to Convalescents and Increases Food Supply.

Paris.—With a view to supplying recreation and employment to convalescents, and incidentally increasing the food supply, the American Red Cross has established ten truck farms in connection with base hospitals in France where, under trained supervision, the convalescents are raising vegetables for consumption in the hospitals. The number of farms will be increased during the year, the American Red Cross supplying seed, implements and trained supervision, as well as money for operating expenses.

At one place, where there are three base hospitals together, a farm of 100 acres is now under cultivation, though the average farm is about eight acres. Two of the larger farms are equipped with tractors. For the most part, however, the work is hand labor, that the convalescents may profit to the utmost from the outdoor exercise.

Owing to climate conditions gardening is an all-year-round occupation in France and is carried on in a most intensive way, with every inch of ground under cultivation and rows between rows, as, for instance, cabbage between rows of potatoes. When plants are removed in the morning the ground is worked over during the day and by night the soil is again at work on freshly sown seed. No charge is made the hospitals for the produce, but accounts are kept and it is expected to show that the farms more than pay for the cost of operation.

Through these gardens many French soldiers will have their first taste of the great American delicacy, "corn on the cob." A greater use of a variety of vegetables is made in France than in America and the Red Cross is supplying seed for beans, beets, cabbage, cauliflower, brussels sprouts, carrots, celery, Swiss chard, chlorey, corn, cucumbers, leeks, lettuce, melons, mache salad, onions, parsley, peas, potatoes, parsnips, pumpkins, radishes, spinach, squash, tomatoes, turnips, cress, fennel and sorrel. A large amount of the last is used both as a boiled vegetable and in making soup.

When this had been accomplished the Red Cross cars went out into the surrounding country to pick up the wounded, who were attempting to walk to a hospital, and to aid the refugees struggling along the road. Besides transporting these two hundred or more wounded men to places of safety, the Red Cross cars aided 130 refugees to the railheads in three days.

But their work had only begun. Despite the evacuation of the hospital and the consequent order for more of the staff to accompany the patients to points of safety, the wounded were coming in. Ninety per cent of them were serious cases. Practically all demanded immediate operations. Not simple operations, but major ones, where a steady nerve, delicate touch and sure hand were necessary to give the wounded the best chance for life.

Work Night and Day.

Night and day the American surgeons worked. There were a few nurses to assist, but all were tired—completely fatigued, mentally and physically. Every one needed rest. But there were the men coming in every few hours, their bodies pitifully torn, and suffering untold agonies. So no one thought of stopping, and even when one did get a few hours off duty there were the big guns only a few hundred feet from the hospital. They belched and roared all night.

Of course, some of the cases were hopeless and no amount of surgical skill or medical attention could save them. Here again the American Red Cross men came in for more work. They had to dig the graves and set the pallbearers.

One night was especially bad. Doctors were kept busy all morning, the nurses had a bit of rest. One nurse only was called upon. One was called upon to the operating surgeon, in service until the last word was rolled finally into his

TREAT WOUNDED IN FACE OF FOE

Red Cross Workers Refuse to Retreat While There is Work To Do.

AMERICANS IN HERO ROLE

Incident of Early Spring Offensive of Huns on the Somme That Should Make Americans Proud of Their Men.

Washington.—The story of the part American and Americans played in aiding the British and the French during the early spring offensive of the Germans on the Somme can never be adequately told. The whole picture is too big to paint on one canvas. It is only by describing the work of individuals and particular groups of workers that some idea of the American effort and its effectiveness in this historic battle can be brought home to the people back home—and then only in a small way.

While it is perhaps only a very small incident in the history of that great affair, the story of how a small band of American Red Cross workers "carried on" at one of the evacuation hospitals back of the British front should make Americans proud. When all but a few of the hospital staff had left with the two hundred or more patients and the Germans were advancing only a few miles away, four American army surgeons, assigned to the American Red Cross for work at this particular hospital, declared their intention of "sticking till h— froze over." And six Red Cross ambulance and truck drivers, as well as several American Red Cross nurses and aides "stuck" with them.

The Americans may not be proud because of sheer bravado, but because the hospital had the opportunity of serving a few wounded soldiers from day to day—and could save their lives. And at this writing these Americans are still there, giving much-needed medical attention to French and British soldiers who are brought back to this hospital because it is the nearest one back of that point of the line.

Stay on the Job.

The big guns of the British and French have been planted in the rear of it—and then moved farther back. The Boche armies come over at night. The little group of Americans have seen the troops, guns and transports go by in streams to points in the rear, but as long as the wounded are brought there, these Americans will stay.

A few hours after American Red Cross headquarters in Paris learned of the big German offensive, it dispatched eight trucks and motor cars to this hospital to aid in the evacuation of the patients. Night and day the Red Cross drivers worked bringing the

FROLIC LIKE COLLEGE BOYS

Cigars, Eggs, a Baseball and a Bottle

More Than Reaction From the Heavy Strain of Very Active Army Maneuvers.

When the whole story of this war shall have been written it will be incomplete without a chapter about how the American boys behaved in France.
The historian should get the material
for that chapter from the provost marshal. He is the chief of police, so far as the Americans are concerned.

I am at present living with a regiment stationed in a little French village where from time to time we can hear the booming of the guns on the battle front, keeping the boys always reminded of the direction in which they are headed, writes a correspondent of the New York Times. There are few French folk in the place; they moved to where it is safer. And so the Americans are pretty much in control of the town, and incidentally,
there are about ten times as many American soldiers here as there ever were civilian Frenchmen and French-women. They are quartered in every available house, and in some that would not be available were it not that they had to be.

In one that falls in the latter category I am living. Myself, this typewriter, and some blankets are the only furniture it has. To get out of my room I have to go through the room of the provost marshal. His room is small; it has a bed. He was a bed until the
of the house put in a charge for beds. Under the army plan, a room with a bed in it costs one franc a day,
but if there is no bed the charge is only 30 centimes. And so the provost marshal knows he has a bed to sleep on and not a box. It says so in the official records of the war department of the United States. We were inspecting the room of the provost marshal the other day and noticed a part of the wall at one end was corrugated steel. We pushed it up, and lo, there was a fireplace. We immediately called the owner of the house and demanded a fire. It was very difficult,
he said, because he had no wood,
and never used fire except for cooking.

Threat to Burn Bed.

When we convinced him that naless
we got wood quickly the provost marshal's bed was going to be sacrificed and changed his mind about the difficulty and said that perhaps for five francs he might let that someone had some food to sell. He got the five francs and two hours later reappeared
with three bundles of fagots, explaining his delay by saying that on the way he had stopped to milk three cows. We got the fire started and quickly saw that at the rate the fagots burned we were soon going to be cold again. We explained to the man of the house that we must have big pieces of wood. He replied that only the cure had such wood, and that it was impossible to buy wood from the cure,
and besides it was Sunday. The provost marshal gave him ten francs and told him to bring the wood. And he did. I was sorry I didn't go along to see how he got the wood from the cure
on Sunday, but the main point was that he got it. The provost marshal has dominion only over the misbehavior of Americans, and so it was none of our affair how the man got the wood.

But when it comes to Americans
the provost marshal is a very different man. He is a young first lieutenant, and his home is in New York city. He has told me that after the war he is going to get out of the army.
He hasn't said what he is going to do, but I think he is training to be a detective. One of the William J. Burns.
He has done some very nice detective work.
The American soldiers behave generally like a lot of college boys in their moments of relaxation, but it is not to be supposed that they don't break loose a bit at times. And because they do the provost marshal has his hands full, and sometimes the lockup. As college boys do, the soldiers make it as difficult as possible for the provost guard to obtain material for conviction of violators of army rules.

It was eight o'clock in the morning. The provost marshal was sleeping soundly, having got to bed at one o'clock after his last round of the village streets, which he found deserted of the regiment's "conduits," as the trouble makers are called. There was a loud rapping at his door
and the "Y" man entered to say that early in the morning the Y. M. C. A.
but had been entered and one box of cigars and one baseball taken, and that the damage was 35 francs. He asked that it would not happen again.
The lieutenant thanked him for the information and sent for a corporal of the military police, and put him on the case.

Stolen Bottle of Wine.

Ten minutes later a large French man came with the information that a bottle of vin ordinaire had disappeared from her shop and that she suspected the Americans. The lieutenant thanked her and got up and started shaving.

In a very few minutes the M. P.
corporal came in and reported that he had found Private — of — battalion in the company barber shop smoking a cigar that had a band like those taken from the Y. M. C. A.
"Good," says the provost marshal.
"Go back and ask him where he got it."

The corporal departed and as he went out of the door a private entered in a bedraggled state. He explained that he had got lost the night before and when he located himself he had lost a hundred francs and that the seat of his trousers had been cut out. He didn't remember just what time it was done. Noticing his insignia, the lieutenant said sharply "Go back to your own regiment. Stay home and stay sober and you can keep your money," and turning to me he said, "that was good dope for me in New York; it ought to work here."

Here the M. P. corporal returned.
"I came to report to the lieutenant,"
he said. "That I asked Private — where he got his cigar, and he said it was given him by a friend and he can't remember who."

"All right," said the provost marshal;
"stick on the case and you might watch out for any baseball games."

Then came in the large French woman to say that she had five witnesses
who saw an American take her bottle of wine. The lieutenant thanked her.
Then the Y. M. C. A. man entered and said he didn't want any one punished for taking the cigars and baseball, and that he was glad they had not taken more. He had had his breakfast.

A moment later an M. P. sergeant entered to say that he had arrested a private on suspicion of having taken the bottle of wine, and that he had been identified by the large French woman's five witnesses as the culprit.
On the other hand, the sergeant added,
the private had five other privates who would swear five different sorts of oaths for him.

Six Eggs Missing.

"Look him up and we'll see about it," said the lieutenant, and he finished shaving in time to receive a French shopkeeper, who reported that six eggs,
for which he had been charging the Americans 11 cents each, had disappeared, and that since he, Monsieur Dentel, and his father before him, had kept shop in that very place for generations and had never before missed
so much as six eggs. It must be the Americans who took them.

The lieutenant thanked him. By this time there was another caller who had an empty cartridge that had once been in the belt of an American soldier. She had found it in front of her house and was sure it was not right for it to be there. The lieutenant thanked her. He was about to start to a belated breakfast when a French farmer came in to say excitedly that some Americans were "mixing it up"
with several German prisoners of war
who were being worked on a road a short distance away.

"Well, that damage, at least, won't matter," said the lieutenant. "I'm going to breakfast." And he did.

It is not to be supposed from these incidents of an hour or two of the life of a provost marshal that the Americans are an unruly lot. Far from it;
they are the best behaved of fighting men. These incidents represented perhaps the twelve hours' declivity of some 2,500 men, most of them under twenty-seven years old, and their escapades were no more than the reaction from the heavy strain of very active maneuvers. When the bugle call tells them at 9:30 o'clock at night to get off the streets, he who refuses to obey is the rarest exception, and generally a new man in the army.

And here comes the provost marshal
from breakfast. He is followed by two French civilians with some tale of woe,
but he is whistling, is the chief of the provost guard, and I have heard the same tune used for a certain verse
from Gilbert and Sullivan when De Wolf Hopper tried to sing the "Pirates of Penzance."

BURIED BARREL OF PORK

Found in Good Condition After Being Hidden Five Years.

A barrel of fresh pork, government
inspected, was unearthed on the farm
of former County Commissioner Henry Bergman in Rice township, near Pre-mont, O., by Mr. Bergman, as he was plowing in the field. The pork was found to be in good condition.

It is believed the barrel containing the pork has been buried in the ground
since the flood of March, 1913. It was discovered in a low spot, along the Sandusky river, and covered with several feet of dirt. The barrel contained 500 pounds.

a few days in cases deemed almost hopeless under old methods of treatment.

FLYER SPENDS 80 HOURS ON WRECK

Rescued Man Gives Thrilling Story of His Perils.

ALMOST GONE WHEN SAVED

Ensign Stone and Companion Cling to Wrecked Seaplane for 80 Hours in English Channel Without Food or Water—One of Most Remarkable Incidents of Seaplane Patrol Co-operating With Convoys.

A full report of the rescue of Ensign E. A. Stone, U. S. naval reserve force, who, with a companion, clung to a wrecked seaplane for 80 hours in the English Channel without food and water before being picked up by a trawler, was received by the commu-tee on public information from its representative in London.

Ensign Stone was given up for drowned several weeks ago, but after five weeks in a hospital he has returned to London. The perils through which the two men passed safely constitute one of the thrilling incidents of the seaplane patrol co-operating with the fleet convoys.

"I left our station in a British seaplane
as pilot," said Ensign Stone, "with Sub-Lieut. Eric Moore of the Royal naval air service, as observer, at 9
a. m. Our duty was to convoy patrol ships. When two hours out, having met our ship coming from the westward,
we thought we sighted a periscope ahead and turned off in pursuit. We lost our course. Our engine 'dropped dead' and at half-past eleven o'clock forced us to land on the surface in a rough sea.

Released Carrier Pigeons.

"We had no kite or radio aero to call for assistance, so we released our two carrier pigeons. We tied a message with our position and the word
'shuking' on each. The first, the blue-barred one, flew straight off and reached home. But the other, which was white-checked, lit on our machine
and would not budge until Moore
threw our navigation clock at him, which probably upset him so that he failed us.

"Heavy seas smashed our tail planes, which kept settling. I saw that they were pulling the machines down by the rear, turning her over. At half-past two p. m. we capsize, climbing up the nose and 'over-the-top' to the underside of the pontoons.

"Our emergency ration had been in the observer's seat at the back; but we had been so busy trying to repair the motor and save ourselves from turning over that we did not remember this until too late. From now on for nearly four days, until picked up by a trawler, we were continually soaked and lashed by seas, and with nothing to eat or drink. We had nothing to climb to, and so to keep from being washed overboard we got upon the same pontoon and hugged our arms about one another's bodies for the whole time.

"We suffered from thirst. I had a craving for canned peaches. Twice a drizzle came on, wetting the pontoon.
We turned on our stomachs and lapped
up the moisture, but the pain came off with salt and nauseated us.

Tins of Biscuit Float By.

"Our limbs grew numb. From time to time the wreckage from torpedoed ships would pass. Once two full biscuit tins came close enough to swim
for, but then, in our weakened state,
we knew that we would drown if we tried to get them. We did haul in a third tin and broke it open. It was filled with tobacco.

"We sighted a trawler about six o'clock on Tuesday evening. We waited at her for half an hour before she changed her course. We were both too weak to stand up and signal.
Moore's hands were too swollen to hold a handkerchief, but I had kept my gloves on and was able to do so. The trawler moved warily around us,
but finally threw life preservers at the end of a line. I yelled that we were weak to grasp it. She finally hove to, lowered a boat and lifted us on board.

"Moore lost six toes from gangrene in hospital. My feet turned black, but decay didn't set in."

Every machine from the seaplane base and those from a station on the French coast had searched continuously for the aviators after the blue pigeon arrived, as did all the patrols
and destroyers in the area.

Ensign Stone is a native of Norfolk,
Va., born July 10, 1891. His mother,
Mrs. Clara Stone, lives at the Red Gate apartments, Norfolk.

BRITISH SUPERIOR IN TANK BATTLE

Enemy Land Ships Flee, Badly Beaten, After Rough Fight
in Picardy.

German tanks which made their first appearance on the western front during the recent German offensive came off second best in their encounters with the more powerful and better managed British tanks.

Full accounts have just reached the British general staff in London of the first pitched battle between German and British tanks, in which a squadron of six German land ships was routed completely by the British. The battle occurred on April 21 near Villiers-Bretonneux, south of the Somme in Picardy.

Six German tanks appeared in front of the British line shortly before noon
and started to roll up the flanks of the British infantry positions. A call for help was sent to the nearest British tank camp and a squadron, including both "male" and "female" tanks shortly appeared on the scene. A rough-andrumble combat ensued.

The British female tanks, which appeared first, were outfought, but the arrival of the heavier male tanks completely changed the situation and the Germans fled after receiving a bad beating.

Meanwhile the British had brought up seven of the new first cruiser type,
called "Whippet tanks," which de-bouched and attacked the enemy's infantry positions on a ridge, rolling up the German line from the north. It developed that this ridge was held by a line of machine gun posts, while beyond the crest a large German force was massing in the open for an attack. The Whippets ran from shell hole to shell hole, inflicting terrible casualties and completely disorganizing
the enemy's preparations for attack.

These seven tanks, each with a full crew of twenty men, inflicted more than four hundred casualties on the enemy
in this engagement, while the casualties on board the tanks were only five men. The tanks left their base shortly before noon and were back at their base again by three o'clock in the afternoon.

BROTHERS REUNITED AFTER MANY YEARS

The war has brought together in New York city two French brothers who had not seen each other for ten years. One is Rene Humbert, a member of Pershing's army in France,
now home on furlough, and the other is Marcel Humbert, a member of the division of the famous French Alpine chasseurs, now visiting the United States. Both Rene and Marcel Humbert were born in France. Ten years ago the Humbert family emigrated to America, Marcel remaining behind.
He joined the famous "Blue Devils"
at the outbreak of the war and has been in many battles. Meanwhile Rene joined the regular American army and went to France with Pershing's first troops, returning two weeks ago with a detachment of Americans who were sent to the United States to aid the Liberty Loan drive and also to boost army recruiting. The two brothers were attending an outdoor meeting
in New York city a few days ago
when they recognized each other, and the reunion began right then and there.

River "Soaked" With Liquor.

The Leavenworth police emptied
more than five hundred quarts of beer and whisky into the Missouri river in one day. The bottles were broken on the bridge railing before the liquor was consigned to the muddy waters.
The liquor was seized in raids and from bootleggers bringing it into the state from Missouri and was used as
"wet" evidence in trials in court.

Invents Flying Torpedo.

Thomas G. Aultman, a mechanical genius of Fairmont, W. Va., has perfected a flying torpedo which may be the answer to the German 75-mile gun.
The torpedo, the inventor claims, can be sent any distance and dropped at any desired point. It is controlled by wireless. The torpedo is propelled by a small gasoline engine and has a lifting capacity of 1,200 pounds.

HIDES IN SHELL HOLE 7 WEEKS

British Soldier Survives Most Thrilling War Experience.

IS DECORATED FOR VALOR

Subsists on Tins of Bully Beef Collec-
ed at Night From Dead Bodies—
Fights Death to Avoid Capture
When Huns Visit Shell Hole and Finally Succeeds in Crawling Back to His Own Lines.

If you have been thinking that "distinguished service" on the battlefield means one grand dash and then a quiet reception, consider the case of Private
J. Taylor, whose valor is briefly related in a late issue of the official supplement to the London Gazette.

This official list of soldiers cited for decorations always carries a short description of the act of valor for which the citation is made.

These two paragraphs accompany announcement of the award of the distinguished conduct medal to Private Taylor.

"Having been cut off with his company, he received a bullet in the thigh, causing a compound fracture. To avoid capture he crawled into a shell hole, where he remained for a period of over seven weeks, during the whole of which time the surrounding district was subjected to a severe bombardment by our artillery. He subsisted on tins of bully beef collected at night from dead bodies, and water
which he obtained in a waterproof cap.
"After some weeks three of the enemy visited his shell hole, but by feigning death he avoided capture and eventually succeeded in crawling back to our lines—a distance of some 100 yards."

In a hospital near London, where he is recuperating, Taylor diffidently unfolded the story of his terrible experiences.

Robbed Dead for Food.

"It was during one of our attacks
upon the Hindenburg line," he said,
"We had gone over the top, two companies of us. We were not by a terrible enemy fire and the fellows were dropping like flies. I was knocked out. It must have been a couple of days before I recovered consciousness.
I found myself in a shell hole with another man who was wounded but could move freely. During the days and part of the nights the bombardment kept up. Shells fell all around but none happened to drop in our shell hole. At night Peters crept out and foraged among the dead for scraps
of beef, line rations and their water bottles. After two or three days it rained. We collected water in our cups.

"That sort of existence lasted for over five weeks. I was getting weaker and weaker. One night Peters crawled out and did not come back. That left me without aid.

Plays 'Possum; Fools Huns.

"Next day a party of Germans came into my shell hole. One lifted my leg—luckily not the broken one or I'd have yelled—but they thought I was dead. I was covered with mud and looked like the other bodies covering the ground. During the next fortnight
I managed to live on the reserve beef
Peters had collected. Then, feeling that nothing worse could happen, I
resolved to try to get into our lines.
It was a lanky night. First I crawled by mistake right into a German line.
They didn't hear me, so I turned back and lurched along for an hour. Then I got into some barbed wire. I was a mass of cuts, blood and rags before I got through. Just then a Very light shot up. I saw a man peering over a trench. He was about to shoot when I shouted. Three of them came out and dragged me into our own trenches.

Before the war Taylor was a factory hand. He is recovering rapidly and looking forward to his return to the trenches.

Remove Teutonic Eagles.

Because they too nearly resemble the German eagle sometimes used as a Teutonic military emblematic figure, four eagle ornaments at the foot of two grand stairways in the State Capitol at Salt Lake City have been removed.

As soon as his attention was called to the resemblance of the ornaments
to the emblem of Prussianism, Governor Bamherger ordered their removal and their substitution with figures of real American eagles.

Indian Coat Valuable.

A curio dealer at Steubenville, O., has a coat covered with 3,300 elk teeth
which he values at $10,000. The coat was made by an Indian in Manitoba, Canada, and is now sewed. It weighs 28 pounds. The owner of the coat is a member of the Order of Elks and wears the coat at all conventions.
With the coat the owner wears an ordinary necklace made of the largest of the elk teeth in his collection.

Italians Show Patriotism.

To show their patriotism, Italian grocers at Wheeling, W. Va., announced that they will not handle
wheat flour, selling wheat substitutes
instead. This action meets with especial approval since Italians in their native land know nothing of wheat flour substitutes.

PLAN TO GET RID OF GRASSHOPPERS

Poisoned Bait Distributed Over Infested Fields Proves Effective Remedy.

SIRUP OR MOLASSES IS USED

Coarse-Flaked Bran Is Most Desirable,
Although Ordinary Middlings or Alfalfa Meal May Be Substituted—Sow Broadcast.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Poisoned bait has proved to be a simple, reliable and cheap method of destroying grasshoppers. It is made up as follows: Wheat bran, twenty-five pounds; paris green or crude arsenic, one pound; lemons or oranges,
six finely chopped fruits; low-grade
molasses, such as refuse from sugar factories, or cattle molasses, known as "black strap," two quarts; water, two to four gallons. The bran and poison are thoroughly mixed while dry, the chopped fruits are then added, and lastly the molasses and water are poured over the bait and the whole thoroughly kneaded. A coarse-flaked bran is most desirable, although where this cannot be obtained easily ordinary middlings or alfalfa meal may be substituted.

Sirup or Molasses Essential.

Low-grade, strong-smelling sirup or molasses is essential to the entire success of the undertaking. Crushed ripe tomatoes, watermelons or lemons may be substituted for the lemons or oranges, if necessary. In California and other southern regions water should be added to the bait at the rate of four gallons to twenty-five pounds of bran,
as in these climates the bait dries out very rapidly and the extra moisture is necessary in order to attract the grasshoppers. Five to seven pounds of the mixture should be estimated per acre.

Another Good Bait.

Another effective bait of similar character is the molasses Chubbie mixture. This is prepared as follows:
Fresh horse droppings, one-half barrel; paris green or crude arsenic, one pound; finely chopped oranges or lemons, six to eight fruits; water sufficient to make a moist but not sloppy mash;
mix thoroughly. As most people object to handling this mixture with the bare hands a pair of cheap rubber gloves or a small wooden paddle may be used for the purpose.

Poisoned baits are distributed over the infested fields by sowing broadcast, either on foot or from a light wagon or buggy. In applying the poisoned bait in orchards, avoid distributing it close to the trees because severe injury to fruit trees occasionally
results from heavy applications of ar-senicals.

Distributing Baits.

The time of day chosen for distributing the poisoned bait is important.
In semiarid regions the bait should be distributed in late afternoon or early evening, just before the grasshoppers ascend the plants on which they usually pass the night. Apparently they are hungry and thirsty at this time and greedily take the bait if it is available. In the moist portions of the country, such as New England and Florida, the bait is best applied in the early morning.

GRAPE PEST IS CONTROLLED

Two Thorough Applications of Arsenate of Lead Are Satisfactory, Say Specialists.

(From the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Large-scale spraying experiments
against the grape-berry moth, in progress in northern Ohio vineyards in cooperation with the Ohio agricultural experiment station, have confirmed
earlier results obtained at North East, Pa., according to the annual report of the bureau of entomology, United States department of agriculture. The conclusion from the experiments is that the pest can be controlled by two thorough applications of arsenate of lead (preferably in bordeaux mixture) made by the "trailer method," the first immediately after the falling of the blossoms and the second two weeks later. This is held to be an important improvement over schedules requiring late spraying, which usually result in discolored fruit at picking time.

U. S. AND FRANCE BEAT ENEMY ON TEN-MILE FRONT

Huns Forced to Yield More Ground in Sector Northwest of Chateau Thierry.

FOES' CASUALTIES ARE HEAVY

Violent Blows of Germans on the Marne Are Repulsed With Heavy
Loss to the Invaders—U. S.
Marines Drive Forward.

Washington, June 10.—Casualties in the American expeditionary forces numbered 104, the war department announced. They were divided as follows: Thirty killed in action, ten died of wounds, six of disease, four from airplane accidents, six by accident and other causes, 35 severely wounded and 17 wounded, degree undetermined.

Paris, June 10.—New progress was made by the French in the region between the Marne and the Ourcq, northwest of Chateau Thierry, the war office announced.

In this sector French troops have pushed their way through Chery to its eastern outskirts and have reached the western edge of Danmard village.

In the district south of Veuilly-la-Poterie the Germans made two violent attacks along the Boursches-Les-Thellier front. The enemy was repulsed with heavy losses in each case.

British Capture Huns.

London, June 10.—British troops took prisoners and inflicted casualties in a battle and patrol actions along the northern part of the front last night, the war office announced. The statement reads:

"We captured a few prisoners last night in a successful raid in the neighborhood of Hulluch. Our patrols inflicted casualties on the enemy in the Struade sector and captured a machine gun."

"The hostile artillery has been active north of Albert and southeast of Arras."

U. S. Marines Smashing Ahead.

Paris, June 10.—American marines and French troops on the sector northwest of Chateau Thierry have driven the Germans back two and a half miles on a front of ten miles and latest reports are that sharp fighting continues. Along the Ourcq river the Americans have taken Torcy and Boursches and the French have captured Veuilly-la-Poterie and Villy. The extensions of the advancing line are marked by Boursches and Villy.

"The fighting was of a more desperate character than on Thursday, but the Germans were compelled to give ground, the impetuous marines and French being too much for them. German prisoners taken now exceed 200. As a result of the advance the enemy has been driven back on the river and across it at Villy. He no longer menaces the positions on the heights south of Veuilly which form an important part of the barrier holding the Germans from a closer approach to Paris."

Violent Fighting West of Reims.

On the wing between the Marne and Reims the French have completed the capture of Biligny. Elsewhere on the salient the infantry fighting has been at a minimum and nowhere have the Germans essayed attacks. The artillery battle is violent west of Reims along the Marne and north of the Ourcq.

In reporting on the fighting northwest of Chateau Thierry on Thursday, Berlin says "local attacks by the enemy were repulsed." A German advance near Sures, between Reims and the Marne, to which 300 prisoners were taken, is reported.

French troops on the Flanders salient have improved their positions near Noere. On the Ploeghe battle field American troops took prisoners in a raid. There and in the Waeyre and in Lorraine the American and German artilleries have been active.

Fell 35 German Airplanes.

Anglo-Saxon airmen on Thursday accounted for 35 German airplanes and a half dozen observation balloons in addition to dropping more than 60 tons of bombs on targets behind the enemy lines.

Increased activity is reported from the Italian front. In attacks between Lake Garda and the Piave, Italian and French troops captured more than 70 prisoners. Austro-Hungarian troops attempted advances on the Asiago plateau, only to be beaten back. At several points along the mountain front enemy patrol parties were repulsed by the Italians.

German Dead Three Deep.

With the American Army in Ploeghe, June 10.—The fighting last night northwest of Chateau Thierry raged with great ferocity for five hours. The Americans captured Hunroches and entered Torcy. Twenty-five Americans in Torcy engaged and drove out 200 Germans and then withdrew to the main line on the outskirts of the town.

A remarkable story is told of a company of marines, all the officers of which, including the sergeants, were put out of the fighting. A corporal then took command and the men pushed on and obtained their objective.

While the losses of the Americans

CAPT. H. G. NEWCOMBE

necessarily have been heavy, owing to the nature of the fighting, the German dead is piled three deep in places. A number of machine guns were added to the American booty.

Hundreds of French children lined the main roadway to Paris this afternoon over which American and French ambulances were carrying American wounded. The children waved their hands and cheered the Americans.

As far as is known no Americans have been made prisoner by the Germans.

Story of Illinois Soldier.

Private John B. Flocken of Olney, Ill., one of the first men to reach Torcy, said today:

"I never saw such wonderful spirit. Not one of our fellows hesitated in the face of the rain of the machine gun fire which seemed impossible to get through. Every German seemed to have a machine gun. They fought like wildcats, but the Americans were too much for them."

The German prisoners taken by the Americans, many of whom were mere boys, had only been in the line for two days. Some of them wore the white bands of the Prussian guard.

The importance of the operations of the Americans on the Marne sector may be realized when it is recalled that only the day before the Americans entered the line the Germans advanced about ten kilometers. The Americans are now holding the Paris road near La Thellier for a number of kilometers.

Four Nights Without Sleep.

Graphic stories of last night's fighting were related by wounded Americans today. They said that at one point the Germans crunched behind boulders and opened fire when the Americans were within ten feet of them. One man who participated in an encounter of this kind said:

"Some of us had not slept for four nights, but we were not tired. We took a second leave of life and sprang at those Germans and smothered them. I never saw so many machine guns. Our men did not think of themselves. They only thought of getting Fritz."

A corporal captured three Germans and was leading them away when twelve others surrendered to him and joined the procession.

Madison Grimm of Evansville, Ind., was in Torcy. He said:

"We were not supposed to go there, but the men were so enthusiastic they kept on. They would go to Berlin if their commanders would let them. The only way to stop them is to kill them. The Germans cannot make prisoners of us. They tried hard to get some of us, but we fooled them. We turned the machine guns on them and took them prisoner."

GERMANS TALK OF NEXT WAR

Use Phrase in Confidential Inquiry to Charitable Workers, Says Correspondent.

London, June 10.—The well-informed correspondent of the Humanite on the German-Swiss frontier says the German authorities have just sent out a confidential circular which indicates that preparations already are being made for the next war.

This official circular is addressed to the men and women "who have voluntarily and gratuitously placed themselves at the disposal of charitable services since and during this war." Each circular is accompanied by a question form which is returnable to the authorities.

The principal question is "Are you prepared to engage yourself from now for the same service for the next war?"

SEIZE ALLEGED CZAR JEWELS

Stones Worth $350,000 Taken by Federal Agents in New York City.

Hoboken, N. Y., June 10.—Federal authorities have removed from a safe deposit vault in New York, leased to the wife of a man who is said to have passed as an American army lieutenant, $350,000 worth of precious stones, alleged to be part of a consignment of Russian crown jewels smuggled into this country. This announcement was made here when Montefiore Kahn and Vladimir Jorgelson, charged with complicity in the smuggling, were arraigned before a United States commissioner and released on bail.
